

why would we even consider ending the wisconsin no call list. Since signing up for the list I have been able to enjoy eating dinner without being interrupted by the constat 5-10 calls a night that were coming in up to 10:30 at night. The direct Marketing firms and banks abused their right to use the telephone. If they want to call people they should have to pay for each persons telephone service. Do not even consider giving them the right to call people on Cell Phones. I can honestly say that the organizations that abused phone system were the major banks and their credit card companies. I do not buy their arguments of calling people for 18 monthes after their service is dropped. If I have dropped their service and credit card I do not need to have them harrassing me for 18 monthes. There are laws against trespassing on private property. My phone is also private property. It is bad enough that we get 4-6 credit card proposals a day in the mail. When 80% of the people in wisconsin have signed up for No Call wisconsin, this shows that people are tired of being harrassed by the calls.

Dan Nordgren